Dear Family,

In French class, your student is learning to describe friends—their personalities and looks—and learning to describe his or her room and everyday objects students might own and have in their rooms. In order to do that, we are focusing on the verb avoir to say what we have and the correct use of adjectives to describe the things we own.

In Unit 4 of the Discovering French, Nouveau!–Bleu program, we are again focusing on reading, writing, listening, and speaking French as well as learning about culture typical of France and the French-speaking world. By making comparisons between French language and culture and those of our own community, students gain a deeper understanding of the similarities and differences that exist between the two.

Please feel free to call me with any questions or concerns you might have as your student practices reading, writing, listening, and speaking in French.

Sincerely,
